

arrhythmiawatch

an educational resource for cardiac rhythm management

A new website from the British Journal of Cardiology

The logo for the British Journal of Cardiology (BJC), consisting of the letters 'BJC' in white on a red square background.

Register now

Arrhythmia Watch, is an independent educational resource for healthcare professionals and all those interested in the field of cardiac rhythm management. The site is free for all to access and there will be special advantages for those who register.

Endorsed by the Arrhythmia Alliance and other medical societies and charities, it carries constantly updated news and views on all aspects of cardiac electrophysiology and devices, commentary on landmark clinical trials, congresses and symposium reports as well as a comprehensive diary on international congresses and symposia.

The editors include Professors John Camm and Gregory Lip, along with an active team of website editors and advisors ensure the site carries high quality, reliable editorial commentary.

Visit www.arwatch.co.uk and join in the online chat and discussion on all aspects of cardiac arrhythmias

Endorsed by:

Supported by:

